While the Executive Order is in place, an individual cannot be evicted if:

- The individual is required to be quarantined based on their diagnosis of COVID-19.
- The individual is ordered by a licensed medical professional to self-quarantine based on their demonstration of symptoms as defined by the Center for Disease Control and Prevention.
- The individual is required to be quarantined based on someone in the home being diagnosed with COVID-19.
- The individual demonstrates that they have a health condition, as defined by the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, that makes them more at risk for COVID-19 than the average person.
- The individual suffered a substantial loss of income resulting from COVID-19, including:
 - Job loss;
 - Reduction in compensation;
 - Closure of place of employment;
 - Obligation to be absent from work to care for a home-bound school-age child; or
 - Other pertinent circumstances.

Notify Your Landlord if You Think the Eviction Order Applies to You:

Give your landlord a written letter explaining that you have a COVID-19-related issue and cannot pay rent. You can find a sample letter at <https://www.jp.pima.gov/Notice%20To%20Landlord.pdf> or the below QR code.

- Include supporting documents such as medical notes, termination letters, etc.
- Send your letter to the address for your landlord that is provided on your lease. If possible send the letter by certified mail, or ask someone to witness you delivering the letter.
- Save a copy of the letter and proof of mailing.
- In addition to giving your landlord written notice, tape a copy of your notice on the inside of your window, where it can be seen from outside. Write your phone number on the taped copy so the constables could contact you if needed. Take a photo showing that your landlord or a constable would be able to see your notice from your front door.

Warning: Even if you are protected by the Executive Order, your unpaid rent will be due in the future. There is no forgiveness plan at this time. Prepare for the likely possibility that you will have to make up the missed rent, including costs and fees if your landlord files an eviction complaint with the court.

The Executive Order Does NOT Stop All Evictions!

The Executive Order does not prevent you from being evicted for non-Covid-19 related breach of your lease. The Executive Order does not prohibit landlords from evicting tenants for violating other terms of the lease. If you cannot pay rent due to an event unrelated to Covid-19, you can still be evicted.
